FOREWORD

Richard Koefo

THE information for this study of Alexander Clark, Loyalist, has been gathered from many sources. Considerations of space forbid the citation of sources for each item of information, whether printed, manuscript, inscriptions on tombstones, or personal recollections. For the New Jersey history, use was made of various histories of the state, of the Archives, published by the New Jersey Historical Society, and of other materials in the library of the Monmouth County Historical Association at Freehold. The Historical and Genealogical Miscellany: Data Relating to the Settlement and Settlers of New York and New Jersey, by John E. Stillwell, 1906, was particularly valuable. For the New Brunswick history, and for the genealogical data, I am indebted largely to the kindness of numerous descendants of Alexander Clark, and their wives, who have answered my many queries and have shown me family records. I am particularly indebted to Mrs. Hedley V. Upton, without whose assistance this study would have been impossible; to Mrs. Simeon H. Jones, who very graciously let me use the vast amount of information gathered by her son and others; to Mr. Inglewood Flower, to Messrs. David and Chesley Clark for permission to copy from letters and other documents in their possession; to Miss Barbara Clark, Mrs. C. A. Gilbert, Mrs. Wm. Rice, Mrs. Lewis F. Strout, and many others who have written at great length; to Mrs. Chas. W. Sprague for showing me the Family Bible of Alexander Clark, which she allowed me to deposit in the Provincial Museum of New Brunswick; to Miss Otty for allowing me to look at her copy of the Gagetown Church Records.

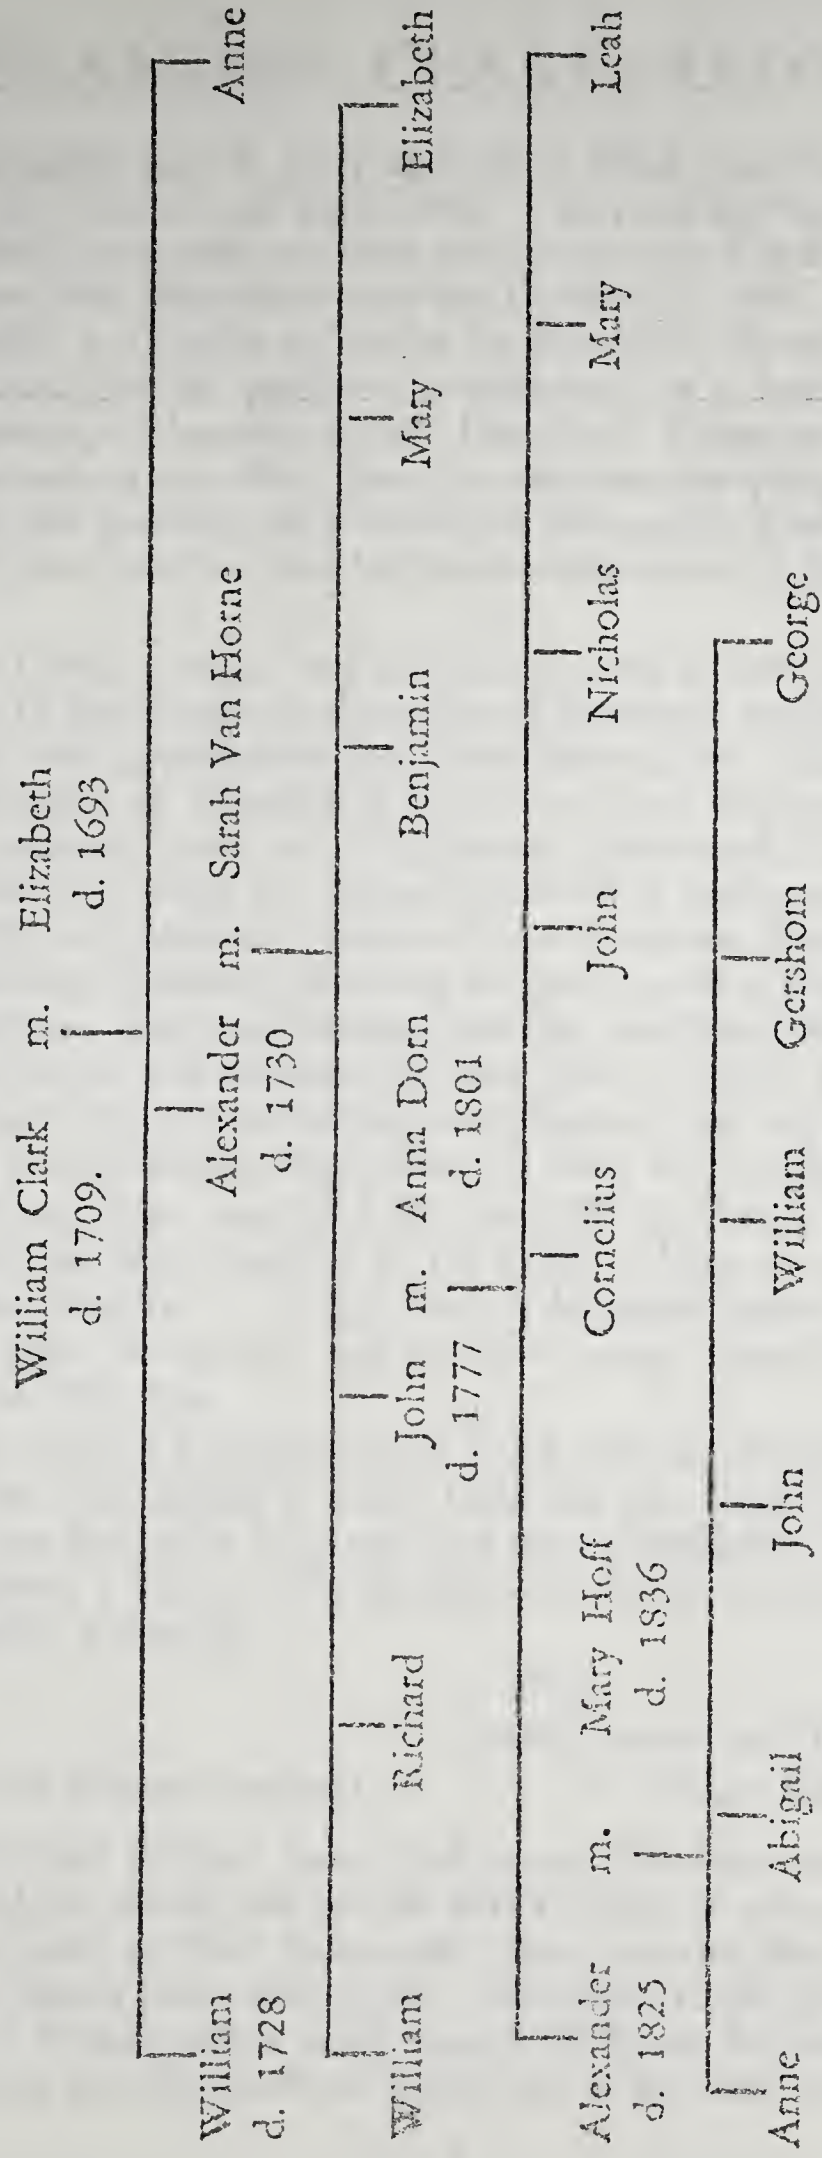

In compiling the list of the descendants, I have preferred to group them by families, rather than by generations; e.g., the descendants of the oldest son, John, are taken up first, and of these, the family of his oldest son, Alexander, is listed, and the descendants of Alexander's oldest child given as completely as known before the second is taken up. The superior numbers refer to the generations, and can be used to compute relationship. Thus, George^o and William^o would be fourth cousins, if descended from different sons of Alexander¹; if descended from John², they would be third cousins; if both descended from William³, John², they would be second cousins. The abbreviations are obvious, b. for born, m. for married, d. for died, dau. for daughter. Brackets around the last name of a wife indicate her surname by a former marriage.

I am acutely conscious of the many gaps in the list of descendants, but I hope that sufficient additional information and corrections will be sent me to make it imperative to publish at some future date a revised and extended study. I shall be very glad to receive and note down all corrections and additions which are sent me.

ESTHER CLARK WRIGHT.

Alexander Clark's descent.

ALEXANDER CLARK, LOYALIST

"Alexander, son of John and Anna Clark was born September 20th in the Year of our Lord 1743." So runs the first item in the family Bible, purchased evidently after Alexander Clark and his family came to New Brunswick with the Loyalists in 1783. The account of the family is probably written in his own hand, the meticulous hand which worked out the problems in arithmetic in a book in the Saint John Museum, "Alexander Clark, His Book, December ye 5, 1763." The statement in the Bible does not mention the place of his birth, which was the township of Freehold, in Monmouth County, New Jersey, nor does it mention that he was the oldest son of John and Anna Clark.

John Clark, yeoman and blacksmith, died March 17, 1777, aged 58 years, 16 days, and was buried in Topanemus burying ground, as his father and grandfather had been before him. His wife, Anna Dorn, daughter of Cornelius Dorn (van Dorn, Dooren, Dorne, the name is variously spelt) of Middletown, Monmouth Co., lived until 1801. Her will, which was drawn up in 1795, perhaps too soon after the Revolution, makes no mention of the eldest son, Alexander, nor of the second son, Cornelius, of whom no trace has been found, but leaves her property to John and Nicholas and the daughters, Mary and Leah, all four of whom had remained in New Jersey. There is evidence that she had not forgotten her oldest son, however, for one of his descendants has a letter written September 22, 1800, the year before she died.

Hoping these may find you and All the family and Al the Children and their families in the same. I have sent several Letters before the Re , this I have Not had a Letter in Upperds of two years Before this and the time seemed Long as I under a Decae of Old Age.

Anna Clark

John Clark in New Jersey had named his oldest son for his own father, and his second son for his wife's father, a custom which came with the family to New Brunswick. John was the third son of Alexander and Sarah van Horn Clark. Alexander Clark died in 1730, at the age of 37, and left a small family, William, Richard, John, Benjamin, Mary and Elizabeth, all under age at the time, so that his wife Sarah, her brother Cornelius van Horn of Freehold, and William Laurence, Jr., of Middletown, were appointed executors. This Cornelius van Horn(e) was the founder of one branch of the van Horne family—there are at least three families of the name—and had married, for his second wife, Elizabeth Laurence. Alexander Clark's brother, William, who had died in 1728, had also married a Laurence. Alexander Clark's tombstone said that he died "with the cancer": the cause of his brother's early death is not given.

They were the sons of William and Elizabeth Clark, whose names were recorded on a stone at the Topanemus burying ground. "William Clarke, of Kingdom of Scotland, died May 26, 1709, aged 63 years. Elizabeth, wife of Wm. Clarke, born in Scotland, died Dec. 25, 1697, aged 42 years."

About the year 1684, the colony of East Jersey was made available for settlement through its purchase by a group of proprietors, of Scottish and Quaker connections, who set about making arrangements for clearing the land and establishing plantations. They brought out with them or sent out groups of servants to start on this task, and many thrifty Scots yeomen, and many Scots who were victims of religious persecution, took advantage of the opportunity to get their passage paid and their living for the first few years assured, while they became accustomed to the country and looked for the land on which they could expend their capital. William Clark and the neighbours who witnessed his will were among this group. William Clark himself seems to have come out with Robert Fullerton, brother of the Laird of Kennaber, in a ship that sailed from Montrose, with 130 souls on board, and reached Amboy some time in October, 1684.

In 1691 William Clark began buying land. He bought 100 acres at Topanemus from Alexander Napier or Neper, referred to in his will as the plantation, called Huckleberry Swamp, bought of Alexander Neper. He bought also 486 acres in Wickatunk, the same district in Monmouth Co., land originally granted to Thomas Hart and sold by him to Richard Ashfield of New York, who sold it to William Clark in 1695. 32 acres of this property were sold to Thomas Lawrie in 1696, but the rest seems to have remained as part of William Clark's estate. He was one of a company, in which are included the neighbours mentioned in his will, Alexander Napier, John Brown, John Hebron, Patrick Imlay, John Baird, William Laing, and other Scots who came out about 1684, who bought a site for a dock on Matawan Creek, adjoining land originally granted to Thomas Hart.

One other bit of New Jersey history has bearing on the Clark family history. Mention has been made of the Topanemus burying ground where the three generations who died in New Jersey were buried. The church at Topanemus had been founded as a Friends Meeting by George Keith, a Scot intended for the Presbyterian ministry, who turned Quaker about 1664 and was a close associate of Robert Barclay and William Penn, two of the Jersey proprietors. George Keith was made Surveyor of East Jersey and came out in 1685, accompanied by six servants to clear land for him. At a later date, George Keith developed doctrines displeasing to the Society of Friends, and eventually, after his return to England, he conformed to the Established Church. He returned to America on a preaching mission and persuaded the church at Topanemus to follow him into the episcopalian fold. St. Peter's in Freehold, the successor of the Topanemus Church, had as rector before the Revolution the Rev. Samuel Cooke, whose Tory views were so pronounced that he was forced to flee. He took with him the church records, but whether he left them in England, whither he first went, or whether he carried them with him to New Brunswick, where he became the first rector of the church in Fredericton, is not known. It is not without significance that Alexander Clark, whose forefathers were buried in Topanemus burying ground and who was presumably a parishioner of the Rev. Samuel Cooke, adhered to the King's cause.

ALEXANDER CLARK'S FAMILY

Alexander Clark had married on November 10, 1763, Mary, daughter of William and Abigail Hoff. He had thus followed the example of his father and grandfather in marrying into a family of Dutch descent. The Hoff's or van der Hoff's of New Jersey were descended from four brothers, John, William, Leonard and Thomas van der Hoff, who came from Amsterdam in the latter part of the 17th century or early part of the 18th century, and suffered shipwreck off Sandy Hook. Mary Hoff was born March 19, 1745, and died in New Brunswick, March 21, 1836, two days after reaching the age of 91 years. "The whole course of her life was marked by strict Christian principles, and at its close she enjoyed the comforting and cheering prospect of a blessed immortality through the merits of Her Redeemer": so the newspaper account of her death commented. It also remarked that she left a number of descendants, a statement that can hardly be considered exaggerated when the incomplete lists now available show that there were at least 80 descendants at the time.

Five children were born to Alexander and Mary Clark before they left New Jersey: Anne, born August 29, 1764; Abigail, February 22, 1766; John, April 4, 1768; William, March 2, 1770; Gershom, April 27, 1774. What became of Mary Clark and her small children during the Revolutionary War we can only conjecture. Anne, the oldest, died September 11, 1781, and her death may have been due to the troublous times. Alexander Clark had "run away to join the King's army," the zealots of Monmouth County reported, and his property had been seized, along with that of other Freehold Tories, before May 1779, when public notice was given to "all persons having any claims, interest or demand in or upon the estates of the following fugitives and offenders (against whom inquisitions have been found and final judgment entered in favour of the state) to exhibit their respective accounts fairly stated in writing to the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas in the county of Monmouth. . . ."

Mary Clark may possibly have found refuge with her husband's brothers, who remained in New Jersey, or she may have found refuge with her sisters, of whom she had at least three. One of them, Miriam Zutphen, wrote to her from Middleton, (Middleton, Monmouth Co., presumably) under date of March 26, 1786, to ask for news of her. It mentions that Sister Mains had had a letter from Mary, dated October, which had said that they were making ready to move up the river to their land. Miriam gave news of their aged father, and of Sister Mains and Sister Briton. Elizabeth Hoff had married Andrew Mains, a soldier in the First Regiment, Monmouth, who had been wounded at Germantown, October 4, 1777.

Whatever had happened in the years between 1776 and 1783, at the end of the time Alexander Clark was able to get his family together and to bring them and many possessions to New Brunswick. He brought, for instance, the deeds of the property he had owned in Freehold, a book of carefully worked out arithmetic problems, and several pieces of furniture, one of which is still in existence, a maple desk, with the initials A C, and the date, 1769, inlaid in the cover.

Alexander Clark drew lot 1232 in Parrrtown, on the north side of Great Britain Street East, between Carmarthen and Wentworth Streets. After his widow's death, the lot was sold by his executors, William and Gershom Clark. Lot 1231 was drawn by John Paul, a native of Lanark, Scotland, who had fired the first shot on the British side at Lexington, and had been severely wounded in the engagement. John Paul married his neighbour's daughter, Abigail, then the oldest of the family, probably before the Clarks moved up to Maquapit Lake, which they seem to have done about 1786. Both Alexander Clark and John Paul held positions in the Ordnance Department, Alexander as Armourer from 1805. They were also associated in the grant of land on Maquapit Lake, the deed for which was registered Feb. 29, 1796, as a grant of 4024 acres to Alexander Clark and 17 others. The 17 others were John Paul, William Bridgeman (Bridges?), William Clark(e), John Clark(e), Samuel Meyers, William Smith Jr., Esther Dunn, James McLean, John Russell, Joseph Abbott, John Upton, William Smith Sr., John Lun(n), George Porter, Jacob Cook, James Peters Esqre., Gershom Clark(e).

It will be noted that Alexander Clark's three sons, John, William and Gershom, are included among the grantees. A fourth son, George, was born August 7, 1787. John left Maquapit Lake and settled on the Washademoak; William and Gershom remained on the original grant; George seems to have settled in Saint John.

How or why John migrated to the Washademoak I have been unable to discover; possibly he went there to run a grist mill. In a petition asking for land on the Salmon River (head of Grand Lake), a petition dated Wickham Township, August 1, 1810, he describes himself as forty-two years of age, "had 300 acres of Land seven Children but being unfortunate was under the Necessity of parting with it, but since purchased 200 Acres more and now in a Capacity of Occupying man." In another petition, dated April 25, 1814, he describes himself as aged 49 years—he seems to have aged greatly in the intervening four years—"lately lost my wife have Eight Children came to this Province 1783 have had a hundred and Seventy Acres of Land," which raises the sort of difficulties usually designated as another headache for the historian. His own list of his children in the Family Bible makes no mention of any child born between 1810 and 1814, and no mention of any wife in that period.

John's descendants spread up and down and across the Washademoak, towards the Belleisle, and intermarried with Queens and Kings County families. Today they are to be found all over central and southern New Brunswick, throughout Canada and the United States. William's and Gershom's families, who remained at Maquapit Lake, with a few exceptions, lost touch with John's descendants. The exceptions are interesting. One of William's sons went to the Washademoak, married a granddaughter of John, and was lost sight of by William's descendants. Gershom's son, George, and John's son, William, moved up the St. John river to Queensbury and a marriage united the families, but this time John's descendants up river were lost to the rest of the family.

In general, William's and Gershom's families married on the Maquapit side of Grand Lake, but three of Gershom's children crossed Grand Lake and married there. Some of William's descendants are to be found between Maquapit Lake and Fredericton, but most of them are scattered widely across the continent. Gershom's descendants are scattered also, but a larger proportion are to be found in New Brunswick. There is some tendency for Fredericton to be their centre, as there is some tendency for Saint John to be the meeting place of John's descendants.

George may have gone down to Saint John in 1805 with his parents when Alexander received the commission as Armourer. In 1814, when he and John's three sons and Gershom's oldest two petitioned for land on the road leading from the Jemseg to the Washademoak, George is described as a resident of Saint John, with a wife and three children, and in 1817 when he sold his lot to his brother John, he is described as a carpenter. After George's disappearance, the family may have scattered among the relatives—certainly they were difficult to trace, and their descendants were mostly unaware of their relationship to other branches of the family.

There is some tradition of the existence of a Harriet, who died young. One of Eleanor Elizabeth's daughters was named for her.

DESCENDANTS OF GEORGE²

George², the youngest son of Alexander¹ and Mary Clark, was born August 7, 1787, after the family had come to New Brunswick, and possibly after they had moved up to Maquapit Lake. When Alexander¹ received the appointment as Armourer on the Establishment of the Ordnance on April 4, 1805, he presumably took up residence in Saint John, and George² probably accompanied his parents there, since he married on February 3, 1808, Margaret Baird, dau. of William Baird of Saint John. George² disappeared, some time before Alexander's will was drawn up in 1823, and foul play was feared. His wife, Margaret, seems to have died April 27, 1827, aged 39, and was buried from John Baird's house, Lower Cove. The five children were given their father's share of Alexander's¹ estate and are named in this order:
